Wald Terriers: This breed, which is closely related to the Boston Terrier, was developed in the United States by Captain M. R. Blanche of New York City. Wald Terriers are known for their friendly and affectionate nature. They are small in size, with a typical weight range of 15-20 pounds. They are versatile dogs, often used in various activities such as agility, obedience, and companionship. Wald Terriers are known for their intelligence and adaptability, making them ideal pets for families. They are known for their coat, which is smooth and short, and their color can range from black and tan to solid black or white. Wald Terriers are also known for their social and energetic nature, making them great for outdoor activities.

AIREDALE TERRIER
CLUB OF AMERICA

The month of June was a very special month for the Airedale Terrier. The weekend of June 17 and 18 featured two Specialty Shows at the same location, the Lake Country Fair Grounds in Grayslake, Illinois. On Saturday, the American Kennel Club presented the 25th Specialty Show, a (one of those twice a year) event that is very special to the Airedale Terrier breed. On Sunday, the Club of America organized the 50th Annual Specialty Show. Both events were well-attended and the atmosphere was lively and festive.

The Airedale Terrier is a large breed, known for its strength and versatility. They are known for their loyalty and intelligence, making them great companions and working dogs. They are also known for their coat, which can vary in color from black and tan to gray and white. Airedale Terriers are known for their ability to work in a variety of environments, including as a working dog, service dog, or companion pet. They are known for their strong and muscular build, with a coat that is dense and water-resistant.

NUORICH TERRIER

NUORICHI TERRIER CLUB OF AMERICA

Last year’s entries, championship specialties were held at New York City, quite a generous quantity one that less than three years ago I had to drive over 500 miles to find a show where we could even see one Airedale Terrier let alone compete. This year, however, we had a bumper crop of entries, which was a delight to see.

One of the entries, a female Airedale Terrier, was judged by Judge Robert J. Pender, who is a noted Airedale Terrier connoisseur. He has judged numerous Airedale Terrier shows and has a wealth of knowledge about the breed. He was particularly impressed with this female, who was judged as being of high quality.

The Airedale Terrier is a breed that is known for its intelligence and loyalty, making it a great companion for families and individuals. They are also known for their strength and endurance, making them ideal for outdoor activities such as walking, hiking, or even hunting. Airedale Terriers are known for their coat, which can vary in color from black and tan to gray and white. They are known for their ability to work in a variety of environments, including as a working dog, service dog, or companion pet. They are known for their strong and muscular build, with a coat that is dense and water-resistant.